INFLATION & YOUR RETIREMENT

It takes about $166 in 2026 to buy what $100 would have bought back in 2006[1] – just 20 years ago!

The Consumer Price Index (CPI) in the US reached 9.1% in June 2022, marking its highest level since November 1981. The U.S. inflation rate had dropped to 3.4% in August 2026; but as you can see, it's rare for there to be no inflation[2].

Why is this important to your retirement planning? Many of us will live 20+ years in retirement. Some of us are years away from our planned retirement date. Inflation turns your retirement goals into moving targets. If you want to be able to afford the things you need and want in retirement, often years in the future; inflation must be accounted for in your planning.
